one of my cuffs. It was saturated with blood. The other ouff I noticed for the trousers were spotted with blood; and there were frush stains of it on my cont sleeves. My anxiety about the patient and subsequent exhaustion had prevented me from thinking of the matter, and I had not done more than wash my hands before starting for was. The people in the car could find condition than to suppose that I had just killed somebody. They sized me up for a murderer. Unshaven as I was, and wearing an old hat, I must have looked rather tough. Not a word was safe, and to remove the traces of imagined crime from my person."-Chi-
